BORN ON THE ROAD.
A Sad Case, Resulting in the Death of a Mother.
Leo Meyers, a tailor at Dayton, Ky., and his wife attended a wedding in this city last evening. Mrs. Meyers, being in a delicate condition, was taken with labor-pains during the evening, and her husband procured a hack to take them home.

When at the Cincinnati end of the Railroad Bridge the driver of the hack, on learning the state of affairs, refused to take them any further, and, according to the husband's statements, insisted on their getting out. The husband further stated that money was no object if he (the hackman) would drive them home. His pleadings were to no purpose.

Mr. Meyers then helped his wife over the bridge as best he could until they reached Wendroth's saloon, near the bridge, on the Newport side. Here they were positively refused admittance, and the now nearly exhausted couple wended their way east.

Front street until they reached Shaffenberg's saloon, near Belmont, where they were given shelter. This was at the hour of 10:30 o'clock, and in half an hour after she gave birth to a boy babe.

The mother, after suffering untold agony from exposure and other causes, died at 3 o'clock this morning. Her remains were taken to Dayton shortly afterwards. The child, at latest accounts, was still alive.

A Wise Deacon.
"Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family so well the past season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors running to us so long?"
"Oro, Taylor, the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time, and kept my family well and saved large doctor bills. Three dollars' worth of it kept us all well and able to work all the time, and I will warrant it has cost you and most of the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time. I guess you'll take my medicine hereafter." See other column.
